The amount of information the Web provides to health-system professionals can often be overwhelming. Recognizing the constraints on our readers' time, PP&P is highlighting a few of the Web's most useful and informative sites.

If you would like to nominate a website to be covered in this feature, please contact our editorial director Deanne Halvorsen at dhalvorsen@pppmag.com.

Controlled Environment Testing Association (CETA)

An all-in-one resource for understanding controlled environment testing

Most pharmacies and pharmaceutical manufacturers employ cleanrooms or specialized containment equipment to meet regulatory expectations. CETA, a nonprofit association of certification professionals specializing in assuring the performance of critical environments, has developed a website that provides:

- An understanding of the current issues relating to controlled environments
- A list of FAQs relating to environmental compliance with USP Chapter <797>
- A guide to the use of barrier isolators in compounding sterile preparations
- A guide to locating a certification company in your area

Institute for Safe Medication Practices (ISMP)
Helping you keep patients safe

A nonprofit organization, the Institute for Safe Medication Practices closely interacts with all health care stakeholders to advance patient safety through the dissemination of information about the causes and prevention of medication errors. The institute is known and respected nationally and worldwide for impartial, timely, and accurate medication-safety information.

Among many other resources, ISMP's website offers:

- Important medication-safety alerts
- Medication-safety white papers
- A discussion board
- Recommendations for safe practices
- Information on error reporting
- Information about on-site consulting services
